IMPORTANT NOTICE TO ALL CUSTOMERS - FURTHER UPDATE -

Extreme Terminal Congestion in Los Angeles

Please be advised terminal congestion is continuing to be a problem in Los Angeles and Long Beach ports, caused by shortage of drivers, severe shortage of chassis, strong cargo volumes and rail service delays.

As a result some transport companies have begun to charge congestion surcharges. It's approx. between USD 100.00 and USD 300.00 per container, as the truckers are facing long waiting times for chassis and container availability.

In addition there are significant delays, up to 2 to 3 weeks in some cases, for picking up empty containers from the ports. The terminal anticipates continuous delays to at least the end of this year.

Your customer service representative will keep you updated if any of your shipments will be directly affected / delayed by this congestion.

Should you have any questions please do not hesitate to contact your account representative.

Yours faithfully,
